low Sayre, Beatrice Susan Traugott, and Gwendolyn Pierson. Madeline Green also recited the prologue and epi-logue with good effect.

Players Win Applaus. Gwendolyn Pierson, in the part of the ever-hungry Friar Tuck, caused the audience great amusement. The two henchmen of the Baron of the Black henchmen of the Baron of the Black Castle were impersonated by Marjorie Asenath Dewey and Lucia Pope Hackley. Lucia Hackley caused much applause by her pretended courage and real terror after an encounter with the "Horned Robyn Hoode." Avisa, the grieving mother of the two attractive children, Joan and Jock, was well taken by Charlotte Hommel.

Martha May Gamble and Florence Gilson Bradner made adorable children. Martha Virginia Neimann was a fine little court messenger as she announced the coming of the impoverished Sir Richard at the Lee; Leta Remick Gallup, and the wicked Baron of the Black Castle, impersonated by Edna Kohmann.

Shows Fine Spirit.

The choruses and several of the incidental songs in the play were taken from the opera of "Robyā Hoode."

The title role was taken by Helen Pauline Lemon, who, attired in a suit of bright wood green and carrying a large English bow, represented skilifully and with fine spirit the part of the attractive English outlaw, beloved by his fellows and even by his enemies. Alma Hamrich, a little Southern girl, played exquisitely the part of Mayde Marian.

The characters of King Edward I and Queen Eleanor were admirably portrayed by Misses Margaret Eliza Gamble and Margaret Lillian Allen. The ladies-in-waiting. Ruth Huldah Crawford, Wilhelmina Helena Lamont, and Louise Ehrhardt, amused the audience by their affected terror of Robyn Hoode's archers were taken by Madel'ine Burchard Green, Opal Naomi Hilliard, Irene Barlow Sayre, Beatrice Susan Traugott, and Gwendolyn Pierson. Beer He Did Not Drink Cost Evangelist 30 Cents

ST. PAUL, Feb. 11.-Walter von Bruch, soloist for the Rev. A. Lee Aldrich, the University avenue evangelist, lives up to the doctrines preached by the Rev. Mr. Aldrich. He does not drink, but he spent 20 cents for beer. Mr. von Bruch entered a Wabash street restaurant and hung his coat on a hook. A stranger later hung his coat on top of that belonging to Mr. von Bruch and secreted a package beneath both.

On arising to get his coat Mr. von Bruch upset the package. There was a crash and on the floor was the remains of two bottles of beer.
Mr. von Bruch was embarrassed. But the stranger came to his rescue. 'That was my beer,' he said. He accepted 30 cents from von Bruch and said he would buy more beer.
